While federal and provincial governments are hoisting taxes, a number of towns are reducing them. Strathmore, for instance, has cut the local rate by 4 mills. Now Bassano is doing one-half mill on the hospital rate. A strictly national but still, something to be thankful for.

EMPIRE TRADE
At the date of the British Empire economic conference draws nearer there is increased discussion and speculation on this coming event. Britain wants to sell more goods to Canada. As an increased Canadian market for British manufactured goods would consist principally of a market for textiles, it will be interesting to see what attitude the Ottawa government and the Canadian textile manufacturers will take.

If empire trade is to be increased there must be a give and take policy on the part of all parties concerned. If a strictly national attitude is maintained, not a conference will be deemed to follow.

CANADIAN WHEAT FOR RUSSIA

The land of the Soviets, which two years ago was an economic threat to the prosperity of the Canadian wheat producer, is now buying wheat from Canada.

Strange that the country which a short time ago was dumping wheat on the world markets is now buying that grain in small quantities. It is true—but nevertheless, it is buying it.

The spectre of the Russian being flooding the world with wheat has been removed for the present, and the changed situation brings a feeling of relief to the Canadian grain grower.

The situation in Russia, which has changed her into a grain importing instead of a grain exporting country is partly due to crop failure in 1931, and partly due to the breaking down of her agricultural system.

Will Russia be a large wheat exporter in the future? In a question of vital interest to the Canadian agriculturist. According to economists, it is not likely that she will be for a few years, at least.

Russia can use large quantities of wheat in her own country. She had no surplus two years ago, but sold wheat to help pay for her industrialization program.

Russia's livestock population has been depleted, and to build it up again will require large quantities of grain to fatten crops. Her centralized farming system is falling far short of expectations, so, summing up the situation as viewed from these angles, European students of the grain industry do not look for any great supplies of wheat from Russia for a few years.

PICTURES ON THE CLOUDS

Announcement from Berlin that a German has invented a moving picture device for projecting pictures on the clouds recalls the story of "The Angels of Mons."

On several nights the angels were seen in the clouds above the trenches, and hundreds of soldiers were killed for the tale. But not until long after the close of the war was the "inside" story of the "vision" made public.

The appearance of the angels of Mons is explained as having been performed by projecting pictures on the clouds above the trenches from a German airplane or from a suitable point in the German trenches with specially constructed equipment.

The Germans, the story goes, hoped the "vision" would strike fear in the hearts of the allied soldiers. The result, however, was to the contrary. Seeing the pictures in the clouds the allied soldiers believed it to be a message from heaven, and confident that God was on their side they fought with more dogged determination.

MOTHER

(by Edward A. Guest)

I am a woman's hopes and dreams,
I wonder does she see
The grown-up man, when life began
She prayed would some day be.
How many of her dreams have I?
Not knowing crushed and killed?
Along life's slopes how many hopes
Have I forever stilled?

I wonder did the man she seemed
In fancy once to see,
When time had flown, and I was grown.

At all reasonable me?
For I have failed and faltered oft
And stumbled on the way,
And of the one forever gone,
She has no word to say.

She never mentions him she saw
In visions round my bed,
The dream is dead, that nobler son
Is now forever dead.

And I am grown to what I am
And brave the trials to be,
No longer lives the dream. She gives
Her boundless love to me.

In several countries of Nova Scotia commercial growing of cranberries has now become an important industry.

A large spruce deposit in Peace River valley, northern Alberta, is estimated to contain one million tons.

Past, Present, and Future

First Girl: "I like a man with a past. A man with a past is always interesting."
Second Girl: "That's true; but I don't think he's nearly so interesting as a man with a future."
Third Girl: "The man who interests me is a man with a present, and the more expensive it is the more interest I take in it."

Doukhobors in Custody
Branch Total of 327

NEILSON, B.C., May 9.—WITH 509 men, women and children in jail here, following Sunday's arrests for appearance in the nude, comparative quietness reigned in the Doukhobor centres on Monday.

Added to the 135 already sentenced to three years in penitentiary, there are now 327 of the hosts of Freedom sent in custody. Some three hundred of this branch of the Doukhobor family are still at liberty.

Large numbers of Doukhobors were loitering about the areas in the sunshine in the prison yards on Monday while their quarters were being aired. Tents are being erected to provide further accommodation should it be needed.

May Nationalism
Canadian Radio

OTTAWA, May 9.—Proposals to establish a nationally owned system of broadcasting for Canada are expected to occupy Parliament at the present session, following the passage of a special committee tabled in the House of Commons today.

Consensus of which will be moved on Wednesday next. After a long series of public and private sessions and the hearing of numerous witnesses, the committee, under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Macdonald, M.P. (Cons. Essex East), recommended a system of government owned broadcasting facilities, controlled by a paid Federal Commission of three, and modelled to a considerable extent, on the lines laid out in the recommendations of the Aird Commission report in 1929.

In addition to the report of his special committee, the House was today advised by the Prime Minister that the United States government had voiced a willingness to make readjustments in the allocation of wave lengths as would facilitate the plans to reorganize Canadian broadcasting.

Three Years Is Verigin's Term

YORKTON, Sask., May 6.—The law today removed Peter Verigin from his symbolic throne, from which he ruled the scattered Doukhobor colonies of Western Canada, and directed him to prison.

While the impulsive Doukhobor leader and several hundred of his followers listened intently, Mr. Justice D. Macdonald, Verigin to three years in Prince Albert Penitentiary this morning for perjury. A King's bench court jury yesterday found him guilty of one of four charges laid against him.

Hurricane Kills 500 Near Saigon

HANOI, French Indo China, May 8.—Five hundred persons were killed, including several Europeans, by a hurricane which swept in from the China Sea across the southern tip of the State of Annam last Wednesday it was learned today.

The coastal town of Phanthien, some 15 miles east of Saigon, capital of French Cochinchina, and the town of Hongay, 30 miles farther along the coastal railway, appeared to be the worst victims of the storm.

The greenhouse products of British Columbia have an annual value of nearly seven million dollars.

President of France
Shots by Assassins

PARIS, May 7.—President Paul Doumer of France died this morning from two bullet wounds inflicted by a "White" Russian fanatic who shot him down as he was attending a war veterans' charity exhibition yesterday afternoon.

Death came at 4:40 a.m., almost exactly 15 hours after the venerable president was shot.

The body was taken immediately to Elvess Palace, the president's residence, from Douhaon Hospital. He passed into coma at 3:45 a.m. (1:45 p.m. Friday, Eastern Standard Time) today, and did not rally. For some hours before, indications at the hospital had been that the end was expected to come at any time. Officials who had functions to perform in case of death of the French President arrived at the hospital early this morning.

It was learned that some time before midnight Mr. Doumer expressed astonishment at finding himself in a hospital bed and he was told: "You have had an automobile accident."

Starline Nation

The attack on President Paul Doumer today swept France with a thrill like a declaration of war. On the streets of Paris pictures of the hearing of numerous witnesses, the committee, under the leadership of Mr. J. H. Macdonald, M.P. (Cons. Essex East), recommended a system of government owned broadcasting facilities, controlled by a paid Federal Commission of three, and modelled to a considerable extent, on the lines laid out in the recommendations of the Aird Commission report in 1929.

In earlier questioning police officers elicited the information Douglou's action resulted from his belief France helped the Bolsheviks by withholding armed intervention after the revolution. Government officials intimated he was not entirely responsible for his actions.

Socialists in France
Overthrow Government

PARIS, May 8.—The government of Premier Andre Tardieu was deposed at the polls today.

The parties of the left, which have not been in power—except for a few days—since the famous "Left Cartel" was established under Edouard Herriot following the 1924 general elections, swept away the Republican majority in the second ballot of the French general elections to the Chamber of Deputies.

With the triolier everywhere dipped in mourning, France voted everywhere that the assassination of President Paul Doumer would probably arrest the swing to the left already evident in the first ballot a week ago. The contrary was the case.

With 610 seats out of 616 reported, the official opposition to the Tardieu government—the Republicans, Socialists, the Radical-Socialists, the Communists and the various brands of Communists—altogether held 340 seats in the new chamber which meets June 1. This total is 32 more than the 308 necessary to secure control of the chamber.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT

At twenty-five, the only thing Diana really wanted was another woman's husband. A nervous wreck to the excitement and strain of London's gay life, she is taken by her aunt, Mrs. Gladwyn, to a famous specialist's office. The physician orders her to the country for a rest, she rebels, but the doctor is handsome and sympathetic. She learns that it is not the great man himself, but an assistant, Dr. Rathbone, who is leaving for the country, she goes to Dennis Waterman's flat where they are surprised by the unexpected return of Mrs. Waterman. She takes the situation quite calmly and Diana and Dennis go out for the evening. Diana collapses on the dance floor. When she recovers consciousness she is in a little country cottage under the care of Dr. Rathbone and a nurse, Miss Starling. Diana does not conceal her dislike for the doctor and nurse.

Now go on with the story.
"I shall be back by six," she told Diana, "and Jenny will give you your tea. Ring if you want anything."
"I shan't want anything, thank you," Diana said, but as soon as she was sure Miss Starling was well away she rang the bell.
Jenny appeared readily.
"Did you ring, Miss?" Jenny asked.
"Yes, Jenny. If a gentleman calls," Jenny's smile widened—"show him up to me in the evening, please."
Four o'clock—she had said half past in her letter—it seemed an eternity as she watched the slow hands of the little clock on the mantelpiece.
Presently she started to find Jenny, flushed and agitated, standing before him.

"Oh, Miss—she's come—and I didn't know I ought to wake you." "Bring him up. Why didn't you wake me before?" "Do I look all right?"
"You look a picture, miss," Jenny lied gallantly.
For a moment Diana could hardly see him. She was blind with emotion, and her heart beat so fast it seemed to be thudding up in her throat, choking her.
Then the mist cleared, and she saw him standing in the doorway, looking at her with eyes that seemed half ashamed, half pitying, half angry. Yes, the gleam was there, and with a little smothered cry Diana held out her arms to him.
"Dennis!"
He came over to her and took her in his arms.
"Poor little girl... my poor little girl..."
She clung to him, half laughing, half weeping.
He kissed her gently as he might have kissed a child, but she seemed contented and lay still, looking at him with big eyes.
Look at me, Miss, she didn't look at me at all.
He raised his eyes with an effort, he was worrying about you, Diana.
She smiled. It was sweet to hear him say that.
"You need not," she told him, "I shall soon be back in London to plague you and quarrel with you again."
He turned his head quickly away, and she said with a sharper intonation, "Is anything the matter? You seem—strange, somehow. Is anything the matter, Dennis?"
"No, at least—," He broke off. "Something is the matter," she insisted. She tried to raise herself, but the effort was too much, and she lay back, trembling and breathing quickly. "You frighten me," she whispered. "You frighten me."
He held her hand to his face—such a frail, white little hand.
"The nothing is the frightened about my dear," He smiled to reassure her. "It's only—I've got to go away for a little while—that's why I came. I had to see you before I went."
"Go—away?... Where?"
"A long way. I'm afraid; at least, perhaps you will think it a long way, though it's nothing nowadays."
"America—why?"
"America—no, not far away," he said, trying to look cheerfully. "It's only five days now—no time at all."
"How long will you be gone?"
"About a week, I think."
"If you loved me you wouldn't go."
"Do you think I want to go?"
"Yes, I do," she said passionately. "My God, Dennis, you're impossible!"
He walked away from her to the window. He was wishing with all his heart that he had not come, and perhaps he had never loved her so well as he did now, when she was weak and weak. Her brave attempt to look pretty for his sake cried aloud to his heart for pity.
He turned around.
"I must go, Diana."
She said nothing, she just lay there looking at him with tragic eyes, and moved to sudden emotion he lifted up in his arms and kissed her passionately.
"Don't forget me, Diana."
There was no answering pressure in her lips, those poor little reddened lips, and he said, stung to unjust anger:
"You think only of yourself. If you had any thought for me you wouldn't be so hard."
"You not hard," she whispered. His face grew sullen.
"Good-bye, then." He walked out of the room without another word or glance, and Diana lay there, her face as white as the pillow, straining to hear the last sound of him—the very last sound of him.
Then suddenly she came to life. She gave a little start and tried to get out of bed.
"Dennis... come back!" "Dennis! Dennis!"
CHAPTER SEVEN
And then Miss Starling came home, and, scared half out of her wits, Jenny told her part of the truth—that there had been a gentleman to see Miss Diana, and that after she had seen him she had been like this, crying and sobbing, and would not be quiet.
"I told you nobody was to be allowed in," the creature said in cold anger. "However, the mischief is done. Stop howling and go over to Dr. Rathbone's. If he is not there, and I am sure he will not, leave a message and ask him to come over as soon as possible." Stop howling do you hear?
Jenny fled, with the sound of Diana's bitter sobbing ringing in her ears like the cry of a lost soul.
"Dennis... Dennis... Dennis..."
It was late before Rathbone came over to the cottage.
He walked into Diana's room and stood looking down at her.
She was lying on her back, one thin arm flung over the pillow above her head, her eyes staring up at the ceiling.
Rathbone spoke her name in a quiet voice, and her gasp faded down to the level of his wife and rested there.
"Well," he said with a smile, "what have you been doing to yourself?"
"Nothing," she said stonily. "It's what people do to me."

"Oh, it's like that, is it?" He sat down beside her and took her hand—her pulse was terribly weak. After a moment he laid it gently down on the quilt.
"I had a draught. I didn't wait it, but she made me." She shot a look of bitter enmity at the creature, who was dissembling her.
"That was quite right," Rathbone said.
He spoke to the creature.
"I will come down in a moment." "If you are going to lecture me," she went away, and Rathbone had merely tried to rouse her when he had suggested that perhaps she was not worth saving. He understood her well enough to know how her pride and interest would be stung, but now, as he looked at her deathly face and obstinately closed lips, he wondered.
He said quietly, "Open your eyes, please, and listen to what I have to say." To his surprise she obeyed at once.
"If you are going to lecture me," she began, and he interrupted ruthlessly.
"That is exactly what I am going to do. If you obeyed my orders and behaved like a sensible girl instead of like a silly, wilful child, by this time you would have been well on the road to recovery, but as it is, you have put yourself back considerably, and believe me—no man in this world is worth it."
She said breathlessly:
"I don't know anything about it."
"And I don't wish to," he said. "But I give you warning now that unless you give me your word that in future you will do exactly as I have told you I shall write to Mrs. Gladwyn and tell her I must give up the case. I have dozens of people on my hands without wanting valuable time on one who could soon be better and strong if she wished. Do you understand?"
She said with trembling lips:
"You are not very kind. I shall lie if you give me up."
"Very well, then, there is to be no more nonsense."
"No," she whispered.
"And you shall go to sleep and believe that everything will come right in the end. It so often does, you know."
"Not for me."
"Well, we shall see." He bent over her, feeling her pulse once more. Her eyes had closed as if the life were too heavy to support, and he waited for a moment, a gleam of anxiety in his eyes, but she did not stir, and he went quietly from the room.
"My aunt wants to take me to Aix," Diana told Miss Starling the next morning, as soon as she had opened a letter that had arrived by the early morning post.
The creature raised her brows.
"Oh, indeed. We must see what Dr. Rathbone has to say about that." He said it already, he said, "I can't fit for the journey. I hate Aix, anyway; people there think of nothing but illness. We went once, last year, I think it was. I was bored to death."
The creature smiled.
"I have yet to hear you say that you have thoroughly enjoyed yourself anywhere," she said.
Diana considered the point.
"Well, I don't know that I ever have," she admitted. "You look forward to a thing, and then when it comes it's disappointing."

"Hail the pleasure of life is in looking forward to things," Miss Starling said, carefully folding one of Diana's silken garments.
"What do you look forward to?" Diana asked.
"Some day I hope to go to Normandy, but it's more than I can afford at present."
"How much would it cost?" Miss Starling hesitated.
"I should think every penny of twenty pounds," she said at last. "That would be if I started a fortnight of course."
"Twenty pounds? Not as much as Diana often gave for one of her frocks."
"Why Normandy?" she asked.
"Italy is much more beautiful."
"The creature said quietly, "I have never been there, but a great friend of mine who died is buried there, and I have always promised myself that someday I will go and see his grave."
"Oh—the man you told me about?"
"Yes, the man I told you about."
"How did he die?"
"He was drowned, saving the life of a little boy."

THE PICTURES

Lovers of romance and adventure will find a treat awaiting them at the Orpheum Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. At 12, 12.12, and 14.12 "The Cisco Kid". It is a stirring tale of the old west, cleverly plotted, gorgeously executed, and revealing some of the finest work that its leading players, Warner Baxter, Edmund Lowe, Conita Montenegro, and Nora Lane have yet contributed to the screen.

Lowe, a cavalry sergeant, departs from Fort Huachuca in search of his old enemy, the Cisco Kid. The trail leads to a little frontier town of Carries, where the Kid's current flame Carmelita is dancing in a saloon. The sergeant wins the fleeing Kid in the shoulder, and then endeavors to get Carmelita to help him trap the bandit, but she scornfully turns him down.

Meanwhile the Kid reaches a ranch owned by a plucky widow who nurses him back to health. In gratitude he stages a bank robbery to alleviate the lady's financial distress, and this leads up to an exciting and unexpected conclusion when Lowe finally tracks his enemy to earth.

George Arlino will be seen in "The Millionaire" Thursday, Friday, and Saturday of next week, May 13, 20, and 27. He is a millionaire by night, a laborer by day—a different Arlino than you have seen before.

Figures of World Unemployment

The International Labour Office estimates that at the end of last year that in the 35 countries for which estimates were available, there were from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 unemployed. Recently the Independent Labour Office has issued additional information, showing that a further category of unemployment has been recorded in practically every country since that date.

The increase is particularly low in Great Britain, partly due to administrative changes in unemployment insurance. In Germany, on the other hand, the total now exceeds 1,000,000, the percentage increase in the last twelve months being considerable.

France shows the highest percentage increase of all countries, her total figure of wholly unemployed well exceeding the million mark. The figure recorded for Italy exceeds 1,000,000 for the first time.

He Couldn't Afford It

That's what he said when asked about having some minor adjustments and small repair jobs done on his car.

These minor troubles later developed into serious ones, and his car was put completely out of commission. Expensive replacements and repairs were necessary before his car was again ready for use.

The old axiom about an ounce of prevention being worth a pound of cure contains a ton of truth.

Don't let that car of yours get run down. Keep it in good running shape all the time and you will be free of trouble and expensive repair bills.

Have an Expert Motor Mechanic and Electrician do your car repair work.
